Project information:

Working closely with the LAC, MDOT gathered meaningful input from residents, youth participants and neighborhood stakeholders whose recommendations are helping shape the future of the 375 corridor.

In January, the LAC explored Detroit's cultural and historical identity and reflected on what stories and themes should be represented within the corridor.

In February, the focus shifted to urban design, as the LAC began imagining open spaces, focal points and placemaking opportunities to enhance both resident and visitor experiences.

In March, the Kresge Foundation presented national examples of equitable development strategies. The LAC was introduced to the project's emerging equitable development framework designed to ensure that future growth reflects community values. Members offered ideas ranging from affordable housing and health and wellness initiatives to workforce development and small business expansion.

These conversations lay the foundation for a community-minded vision that will elevate the entire project area.

Public comment:

MDOT continues to seek public participation and welcomes input. Comments can be submitted via email, by phone at 855-375-MDOT (6368), on the project website and in person at the community meeting.
